ABOUT BULGARIA

The history of Bulgaria starts with the forming of the First Bulgarian Empire by Asparukh in 681 AD though previously other Bulgarian rulerships existed, but traditionally history of Bulgaria is beginning with Asparukh and union between Bulgars and Slavs at the lands of today's Bulgaria.

In 632 the Bulgars, originally from Central Asia,^[1] formed under the leadership of Kubrat an independent state that became known as Great Bulgaria. Its territory extended from the lower course of the Danube to the west, the Black Sea and the Azov Sea to the south, the Kuban River to the east, and the Donets River to the north.^[2] Pressure from the Khazars led to the subjugation of Great Bulgaria in the second half of the 7th century. Kubrat's successor, Asparukh, migrated with some of the Bulgar tribes to the lower courses of the rivers Danube, Dniester and Dniepr (known as Ongal), and conquered Moesia and Scythia Minor (Dobrudzha) from the Byzantine Empire, expanding his new kingdom further into the Balkan Peninsula.^[3] A peace treaty with Byzantium in 681 and the establishment of the Bulgarian capital of Pliska south of the Danube mark the beginning of the First Bulgarian Empire. (At the same time one of Asparukh's brothers, Kuber, settled with another Bulgar group in present-day Macedonia.^[4])

Bulgarian culture is formed by traditions of the Bulgars and to some extent Thracians, Slavic language and after Christianisation - by Orthodox Christianity, drawing from both Western European cultural traditions (19th, 20th century) and the Eastern, Byzantine and later in 19th and 20th century Russian culture.

The First and Second Bulgarian Empires formed a cultural centre in Slavic Europe with its literary schools and educators which were a major source for Slavic literature and standardization of written literary Old Slavic language.

In political aspect Bulgaria went through radical changes (kingdom, communism and later republic democracy) and lost independence twice in its history, once by the Kievan Rus' and the Byzantine Empire (1018–1185) and once by the Ottoman Empire (1396 - 1878), which introduced many challenges, esp. after the Liberation in 1878. Bulgarian Kingdom after the Liberation was seeking to restore Bulgarian institutions, give place to Bulgarian science and education (where many new models were adopted like education for women), literature (creation of modern Bulgarian literature), standardization of the Modern Bulgarian literary language, etc. During communism Bulgarian state was seeking to improve the economic situation of small towns and villages, and to reduce social class differences that emerged in the monarchy and were partially received by the social differences during the Ottoman rule, education was made economically accessible to all, but entrepreneurship was forbidden, also freedom of speech, and travel to abroad was difficult due to inner restrictions which made Bulgarians eager to abandon communism. After the events at the end of 1989 and early 1990 in the Eastern Europe Bulgaria changed to democratic republic giving place for political pluralism and freedom of speech, and free market economy. In the early 2000s Bulgaria had a government with PM the former king and son of king Boris III - Simeon Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, but monarchist sentiments didn't show strong enough for recovering monarchism, in fact Saxe-Coburg-Gotha's party formed coalition for the next government with the former communist party BSP, and currently Bulgaria is seeking for some neoliberal reforms that to both improve economy and put Bulgaria on the map of the leading in economic, cultural, educational and political aspect countries.

ABOUT SOFIA

Sofia through the Centuries

Founded seven thousand years ago, Sofia is the second oldest city in Europe. It has been given several names in the course of history and the remnants of the old cities can still be seen today.

Serdika was the name of the central dwelling of the ancient Thracian tribe known as "Serdi". It bore that name when it became part of the Bulgarian state at the beginning of the ninth century and was soon recognised as one of the most important feudal towns, acquiring the Slavic name Sredets.

Near Sofia lies Boyana church, which is one of the most valuable memorials of Bulgarian and European culture. The church boasts frescoes, acclaimed by specialists as "the best examples of eastern mediaeval art during its twelve century history".

The decline of Sofia during the Ottoman Empire was followed by the rejuvenation after the liberation in 1879, when Sofia was chosen as the capital of Bulgaria at the First National Constituent Assembly. The plans of 1881-1882 were followed by a brisk and straight-forward period of construction.

In 1900 the City Council approved the emblem of Sofia and the motto "It Grows but Does not Age".

During the years of the totalitarian regime (9 September 1944 - 10 November 1989) Sofia became the major national economic, academic and cultural centre. From its years of socialist growth, however, the capital inherited a great deal of problems, which are at present the priorities of the democratically - elected council of Sofia.

In 1992, in honour of the celebration of St. Sofia the Martyr, the Government chose September 17th as the Day of Sofia. The flag of Sofia Municipality was also consecrated on that day.

"ARENA ARMEETS" SPORT HALL

The multifunctional sports hall "Arena Armeec Sofia" is one of the most modern in Europe, designed and constructed in full accordance with international standards.

The main function of the "Arena Armeec Sofia" sports hall is to provide the Bulgarian athletes best conditions for development of sports and sports activities. It meets the requirements of all international sports federations and their standards for conducting of World and European championships and tournaments in the category of the prestigious "Grand Prix".

The capacity of the sports hall is 12,373 seats, including 206 VIP and 96 specially equipped places for journalists.

The sports hall also offers very good opportunities for a wide range of cultural events: concerts, exhibitions, congresses, symposia, seminars, etc. By using a platform with removable seat rows for holding large concerts, the capacity of the "Arena Armeec Sofia" can be increased to 17,906 seats.

The conference hall which is located on an area of 150 square meters has a capacity of 108 people. Next to the conference hall is located the presscenter.

The outdoor parking has the capacity of 900 seats and the indoor parking has the capacity of 97.

In one of the lobbies of the arena has been arranged an exhibition of works by young artists from the school "John Doe" Sofia. The organizers of this exhibition are the Ministry of Education and Science and the management of "ARENA ARMEEC." Five of the best pictures of the students are exposed to the Government Lodge.

It have been made over 50 amendments to the draft of the hall like locker rooms, bathrooms, new administrative block, control center, etc.

Tatami is a blue, 2-3cm thick foamy rubber quadrant 9x9 meters in size, the edges are bound with a unique design used for power in TKD sparring or classic tatami.

The fighters wear white safety foot protectors on their feet, and on their hands wear white 10 ounce gloves with fully closed hand. The fighters wear white head guards on their heads, and on the body, under the dobok, they wear light guard for the ribs approved by the ITF.

Every team wears a sleeveless jersey in national colors or color of their own choice.

Electronic score system is used. Every umpire gives points electronically, computer cumulates and divides given points and it releases average score for each fighter on the scoreboard. The points are visible for the audience.

The umpires

Umpires are divided into:

- Point scoring umpires
- Center ring umpires and
- the jury

The role of the point scoring umpires is to give points using the electronic score system.

The center ring umpire controls the fight according to ITF rules.

The main umpire of the jury takes care that the tournament is organized according to the rules and monitors that the electronic score system working properly. The main umpire of the jury must now how to use a computer.

The umpires wear dark linen pants and dark polo shirt which have the white letters ITF on the back and ITF logo in the front. They wear black sport slippers with soft sole so they don't damage the tatami.

Composition of the teams

The team consists of 7 adult male fighters, 1 coach and an official representative or manager.

Weight categories are: -64kg, -71kg, -78kg, -85kg and +85kg.

Match structure:

A match is divided into 3 parts. During part 1 fighter's fight in weight categories with the lightest category starting, leading to heaviest category last.

The first half finishes when all categories have fought.

There is a 5-10 minute break between parts of the fight.

During the break pairs are drawn for the second part. A coin is used to determine which team chooses their first fighter, with roles reversed for the next fight.

During second and third parts the team can change 2 fighters from the first part. Fights are in absolute category during second and third parts i.e. regardless to weight.

All fights in part 1 & 2 are 2 minutes in duration.

Fights are 10 minutes in time in part 3. Each coach decides how long his fighter will fight, but it cannot be less than 30 seconds.

The coach must signal the central umpire when they wish to change fighters. The central umpire determines when the change shall take place; the new fighter can't enter into the ring until the previous fighter steps into the red area of the bordering. The teams are lined up at the beginning and end of the team match. With classic ITF bow they first bow to the umpires at the main desk, and then to each other.

The winner isn't declared after each fight, the winning team is declared at the end of the whole match. Changes of fighters between individual fights are flying without any additional ceremony or procedure.

Language

The official language in Bulgaria is Bulgarian. Bulgarian was the first "Slavic" language attested in writing. As Slavic linguistic unity lasted into late antiquity, in the oldest manuscripts this language was initially referred to as языкъ словяньскъ, "the Slavic language". In the Middle Bulgarian period this name was gradually replaced by the name языкъ българьскъ, the "Bulgarian language". In some cases, the name языкъ българьскъ was used not only with regard to the contemporary Middle Bulgarian language of the copyist but also to the period of Old Bulgarian. A most notable example of anachronism is the Service of St. Cyril, a 13th-century Middle Bulgarian manuscript from northern Macedonia according to which St. Cyril preached with "Bulgarian" books among the Moravian Slavs. The first mention of the language as the "Bulgarian language" instead of the "Slavonic language" comes in the work of the Greek clergy of the Bulgarian Archbishopric of Ohrid in the 11th century, for example in the Greek hagiography of by Theophylact of Ohrid (late 11th century).

Alphabet: Cyrillic

In 886 AD, the Bulgarian Empire introduced the Glagolitic alphabet which was devised by the Saints Cyril and Methodius in the 850s. The Glagolitic alphabet was gradually superseded in later centuries by the Cyrillic script, developed around the Preslav Literary School, Bulgaria in the beginning of the 10th century.

Attention: Bulgarians shake their heads from the left to the right to express "YES". However, this stands for "NO" in the rest of the world.

Religion

The Bulgarian Orthodox Church - Bulgarian Patriarchate (Bulgarian: Българска православна църква - Българска патриаршия, Balgarska pravoslavna tsarkva - Balgarska patriarshia) is an autocephalous Eastern Orthodox Church with some 6.5 million members in the Republic of Bulgaria and between 1.5 and 2.0 million members in a number of European countries, the Americas and Australia. The recognition of the autocephalous Bulgarian Patriarchate by the Patriarchate of Constantinople in 927 AD makes the Bulgarian Orthodox Church the oldest autocephalous Slavic Orthodox Church in the world, which was added to the Pentarchy of the original Patriarchates - those of Rome (which became today's Roman Catholic Church after the Schism), Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem - and the autocephalous Georgian Catholicosate.

90% of Bulgarian people are Orthodox Christians and celebrate the traditional Christian holidays - Christmas, Easter and the name days of Bulgarians named after Archangels, Saints and Martyrs. About 8% are Muslims and a few are gypsies. As a whole Bulgarian people are very obliging and hospitable.
